ASTILE is durable, water-proof, elastic and non-cracking because it is built on a for roofing purposes in the Carey mills. This felt is saturated with asphalt cement and coated with the greatest waterproofing material ever known-tempered asphalt compound.

Into this asphalt is embedded a coating of crushed slate.

It is the slate surface of course that makes this roofing spark-proof. Underwriters place Lsstile Roofing in Class C and permit lower rates of insurance on account of this greater safety.

The roofing never requires painting because the natural red or green slate surface never fades, is long wearing, and always beautiful.

Carey Lastile is inexpensive, easy to lay, and is ready for prompt delivery. Consult us about your roofing problem today.

of describing the pschycolory of going over the top has the most compelling yet the most uncanny appeal.

"More than 139 men of my own battalion fell in one fight alone before an important railroad junction in the Champagne near the close of the war," said the sergeant. "When one sees comrades fall on all sides the feeling of disregard for life, even one's own, comes over the soldier. Realizing that the chance to get out of the nosty business of war lay over only two routes—the route west with a white cross over a thing that used to be a man or the racking agony of a hospital bed—during the last trying days soldiers gave the thought of death ne more concern than that of going to breakfast. The idea of coming out unscathed never entered the head of the Devil Dogs, at any rate.

"So nerve racking was the strain during the last days of the conflect that personally I tried my, best to get wounded and with eagerness bordering on frenzy I went into the thickest of the fight.

"Unfortunately I only got hit occasionally by a small piece of shrapnel and kept on my feet during all the trying days which marked the closing weeks of the war."

Sergeant Carleton has gone to Paris, S. C., where he will at once enter the foreign service of the United States marine corps.

WESTERN UNION FORCE MAY SHARE IN PROFITS

MAY SHARE IN PROFIIS

Memphis employes of the Western into are awaiting with much interest he outcome of a movement begun early in May, which may result in an arrangement for profit-sharing for all imployes of the company.

The board of directors on May 13 passed a resolution under which a committee composed of representatives of the employes and the directors are working out a profit-sharing plan, which later will be presented to the board for approval. Newcomb Carlton, president of the company, has expressed himself in favor of establishing such a plan, which is discussed at length in the June issue of the Telegraph World, the monthly paper published by the Association of Western Union employes.

The Standard Oil company is abother of the great corporations which is working out such a plan. It already has been put into effect partially, it is said, in the big plant of that company at Bayonne, N. J., in connection with the work of a committee composed jointly of employes and company officials, engaged in working out a number of other employment problems.
